

NAD's NEW MASTER SERIES HOME THEATRE COMPONENTS RECEIVE PRESTIGIOUS EISA AWARD

Best Product 2006/7 Home Theatre – High-End System

8 September 2006

NAD's recently announced Master Series A/V Home Theatre products, the M55 universal disc player, M15 processor/pre-amp and the M25 multi-channel amplifier, have received Europe's most prestigious EISA (European Imaging and Sound Association) Award for Best Product 2006/7 Home Theatre – High-End System.

EISA represents some 50 leading photo, video, audio, home theatre and convergence magazines from over nineteen European countries and is highly regarded for their endorsement of a product.

In awarding NAD the award for Best Product 2006/7 Home Theatre High-End system the citation reads, "For 'high-end' home theatre, the combination of the NAD M55 universal disc player, M15 processor and M25 multi-channel amplifier is the perfect choice. The M55 player can play CD, DVD-Audio, DVD-Video, SACD and MP3 – and thanks to a Faroudja DCDi chip, it's able to upscale any video source to 720p or 1080i via HDMI. Its 12-bit/216MHz video converters allow you to experience stunning pictures from component video. The brain in the system, the NAD M15 surround processor with HDMI video switching, is able to decode practically every home theatre sound format, and is upgradeable for future compatibility. Completing the set, the M25 is a 7 x 160W power amplifier, delivering rock-solid home cinema experiences with enough power to lift your roof, yet with all the fine detail to satisfy even the most demanding audiophile”.

Every year EISA member magazines come together for the annual European Awards. From all products introduced during the preceding twelve months, each panel member must choose the best equipment in each category. The EISA Awards honour the products based on the most advanced technology, most desirable features, expression of design, most satisfying ergonomics and value for money.

NAD's M55 universal player, M15 processor/pre-amp and M25 multi-channel amplifier are covered by a national two-year warranty and available at selected NAD dealers throughout Australia and New Zealand.
